APPLETON'S AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA

New Revised Edition.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers in every subject. Twice the work in size. Illustrated with Several Thousand Engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA was completed in 1863, since which time the rapid elevation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal development which has taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit to an exact and thorough revision and to issue a new edition, entitled THE AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA.

In the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperfect guide.

The most noteworthy political events have occurred, the most important scientific discoveries have been made, and the most useful inventions have come into general use. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, largely modifying existing relations. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has during the period covered by it been commenced and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by recent explorers and others.

The great political novelty of the last decade, with the political events of the year of the publication, have given public interest to a multitude of new ones, whose names are in every one's mouth, and whose lives are sought for in every cyclopædia. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, at which the contending powers have employed the most formidable instruments of destruction of the day, but which might now to take their place in permanent and enduring history.

In preparing the new edition the editors have accordingly had the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest date, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the latest events in history, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and industrial events.

The work has been kept a after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotyped plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, the result being that a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a greatly enhanced degree of excellence, with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in this work are chiefly those which, not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater intelligibility and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture, and art, as well as the various processes of manufactures and manufactures, although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to render them attractive and beautiful. The cost of these additions is enormous, and it is believed they will prove a welcome and valuable accession to the literature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold by Subscription only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be issued in 16 large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.

LETTER FROM SARATOGA

LIFE AT THE SPRINGS—THE HOTELS—THE WATERS—THE MUSIC—THE FAIR SEX.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N Y Aug 2 1874

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier —

"Every one to his taste," says the proverb, and so say we all of us, but to our limited vision the famous place combines more attractions when reckoned up in order, than any in our country it has been our privilege to visit.

The first and most important of all, is the character and quality of hotel accommodations.

It is no injustice to other places to say they are unsurpassed.

To enumerate them and dwell upon these peculiar attractions would leave me no place for other matters.

A gentleman stopping at the States told us, that they had fourteen hundred guests, and he considered his wants in every respect as well provided as if there were but fifty persons in the house. Of course, there must be the most exact system and great executive talent required to provide for the varied wants, gratify the whims, satisfy the most unreasonable demands of such a community of pleasure seekers. I say unreasonable demands for such a multitude, each of whom is paying thirty-five dollars a week for food and lodging and there are no inconsiderable numbers who demand to have their money's worth, indulging in expectations simply beyond the power of mortal to satisfy.

The five principal hotels, viz. United States, Congress Hall, Union, Grand Central and Clarendon are doing a flourishing business; all is orderly, smooth as clock work, showing thorough system and organization.

Besides these, there are any quantity from twelve to twenty dollars a week, which are well patronized.

These of course are sought by persons of short purses and less pretentious plain people from the country villages who are determined that Sarah Ann shall have a season at Saratoga, as well as her more aristocratic cousins with huge trunks, who inhabit the cities.

These latter are regular patrons of the concerts daily given upon the piazza of the great Houses. At half past ten in the forenoon they may be seen occupying the spacious rustic rocking chairs upon the back piazza of the "States" listening to the beautiful music of Prof Stub's orchestra, in company with hundreds of guests of the hotel, or from half past three to half past four in the afternoon they are at liberty to stroll to the shady retreat of Congress Hall where the celebrated orchestra of Bernstein will enchant their ears, and thrill their souls with its wonderful harmonies. The "Clarendon" and "Grand" are not behind their neighbors in this respect, for Parlatte at the former, and Wollenhauer at the latter, never play to empty seats, or fail of a frequent encore. Outside the springs, this is perhaps, the most noticeable and attractive feature of Saratoga.

But "The Springs" are a perpetual miracle. That year after year, and century after, century they should continue to dispense their rich treasures without diminishing in supply or deterioration in quality, sparkling, refreshing, and health giving to the thousands who now daily repair thither, each one eager for a draught and then another and another, that the supply of such treasures should be, as it must be inexhaustible, is a marvel inexplicable.

The wonders of the place seem as inexhaustible as the waters, for every few years, a new spring is discovered with some new properties to cure the ills to which poor humanity is heir.

Surely in these respects, Saratoga has no rival and she may well be proud of her honors. Her votaries are faithful as year after year testifies. Once come to Saratoga and we pledge our word a second and third visit will surely follow. We must have one more draught from the Congress, promenade again, these magnificent piazzas, gaze upon the beautiful creatures whose costly adornings are the study of an artist, captivating the unwary and sending misery into thousands of susceptible bosoms.

A young friend with me on the commodious back piazza of the "States," listening to the beautiful rendering of the band, and gazing with no uncommon interest at the display of silks, satins, velvets, laces, diamonds and other costly ornaments, aptly observed, that it would save much nonsensicaly speculation if each of the jeweled fair ones, would hang a card to her person on which is marked the value of so much outward magnificence.

No doubt but these beautiful creatures are waiting for some courageous one to set such an example, and then all others would follow as naturally as a flock of sheep follow their leader.

But we must again drink in the harmonies of Bernstein, sail upon the Lake, and drive to Glen Mitchell, for the memory of all these haunts will be like a pleasant dream, and why not again enter into their full realization?

But I must forbear. Your space and my time are too valuable for the indulgence of romance or dreams.

I could come down to the more practical subjects, of regattas, horse racing and fighting the tiger at Morrissey's, but your correspondent "T" has already given you a graphic account of the former and to omit the latter will be no loss. The bright sun is not without spots, nor the sweetest rose without thorns; why should we not look for blemishes here. S.

AN INTERESTING WILL CASE

DECISION AS TO A QUESTION OF SANITY.

An opinion has just been announced by the law court at Portland, in an important will case, pending upon the law docket in this district, brought up from Sagadahoc county. The will having been duly probated, was carried by appeal to the Supreme Judicial Court where it was also sustained by a verdict of the jury, the question at issue being the sanity of the testatrix, and undue influence of others upon her in making it. The case was brought before the full court upon exceptions and a motion for a new trial. Only so much of the report is copied below as may be supposed of public concern, the rest relating to matters of practice in the courts, and of interest only to the profession.

Mary A. Robinson, appellant vs. Francis Adams and another, Executors. Docket Entry—"Exceptions and motion overruled. Judgment on the verdict."

Hemphill—In this case the main issues were whether or not the testatrix was of sound mind when she made her will, and whether or not she was unduly influenced in making it, either by living persons or by communications which she supposed to come from her deceased husband, upon the dead thus dictated, or indicated his approval of the will. This belief and the idea that her son-in-law was possessed of a demon, through whose aid he controlled his wife and other similar ideas, together with some data in consonance therewith, were relied upon by the appellants to support these issues on her part. Whether these things amounted to an insane delusion and affected the terms of the will or not, was rightly left to the jury, under appropriate instructions. The court cannot say, as matters of law, that such belief, if proven to exist, is ipso facto proof of insanity or insane delusions, so as to vitiate a will.

If the testatrix was so influenced by others that the instrument was in fact their will and not hers, it is void for undue influence; but mere advice, opinions or arguments, however persistently and strongly urged, will not amount to undue influence, if the testatrix retained her own judgment and free agency, so as to be governed ultimately by her own will, whether she followed the advice given or rejected it; nor does it make any difference whether this advice came from living persons or was supposed to come from one deceased, if she regarded it simply as advice or opinion. The source of the advice can make no difference, if it did not supplant and overcome the testatrix's own will.

Gould of Thomaston, for the appellant. Adams of Brunswick for the executors.

CHARLES DICKENS

The London Correspondent of the Albany Argus says of Dickens's domestic unhappiness:

"In the last American papers which have come to hand I see that Wilkie Collins' drama of the 'Frozen Deep' has been performed in Boston. You are perhaps aware that Collins has recently been engaged in turning this play into a novel. 'The Frozen Deep' awakens many a reflection upon the strange piece was indirectly the genius of bringing about much of Dickens' domestic unhappiness. The whole story of his separation from his wife has never yet been properly told, and in all probability never will be as his widow is resolved to maintain the silence she has so long kept. But it is generally known that the family is dissatisfied with Forster's book. Your readers may have heard of the grand amateur performances given in 1850 at the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, in aid of the Douglass Jerrold Fund. Dickens, Collins, Shirley Brooks, Mark Lemon, and many other celebrated writers took parts. The ladies' characters were interpreted by professional actresses. Among these was Miss Ellen Ternan. She was then a fresh, pleasant-looking girl, not especially pretty, but possessing a good figure and an extremely agreeable manner. If ever the German poet's doctrine of elective affinities was proved to be true, it was when Dickens met Miss Ternan. It was evident to nearly all of us that the two were mutually infatuated. Dickens was constantly at her side, though his manner was carefully guarded. Mrs. Dickens was with the party, but she did not appear to notice the intimacy. Very soon after these performances Miss Ternan, at Dickens' wish, left the stage. His affection for her was said to have been purely platonic, and I have never met any one who was disposed to dispute this belief. But, nevertheless, it was this intimacy which was the final cause of the rupture between Dickens and his wife. For many years prior to 1859 their mutual relations had been anything but happy, although I do not think that Mrs. Dickens had previously had any well grounded cause for jealousy. A short time after the party returned from Manchester, Mrs. Dickens went into a fashionable jeweller's at the West End, where she was in the habit of dealing, and was asked by one of the firm who knew her well, how she liked her new bracelet. She said that she did not understand him, as she had not received any such article. The gentleman then explained that it was one Mr. Dickens had ordered for his wife, with a diagram and some hair in. This of course opened Mrs. Dickens's eyes, and a separation speedily followed. Since that time Mrs. Dickens has lived very quietly in a pretty little house near the

THE BROOKLYN SCANDAL

The sworn testimony of the wife of Theodore Tilton, is telegraphed from New York, would fill two or three columns in this paper and we have been compelled to give a synopsis which, while indicating the general tenor, necessarily fails to convey an adequate impression of the most pitiful story of neglect, insult, persecution and utter brutality, ever related by a wife of a husband claiming to be a civilized being. It is almost too shocking for belief, and yet we think that any unprejudiced person who has followed in detail the developments of this remarkable case must be deeply impressed with the apparent sincerity of utterances which seem reluctantly uttered from a heartbroken woman by the attempt of her husband to brand her with infamy in the eyes of the world. It is true that Theodore Tilton is not on trial in the case which he has brought against Mr Beecher, but the character of the accuser is an important element in the case, and the wife and mother whom he has assaulted has a right to be heard in answer. After recounting the history of wretched years, in which her husband alternated the assertion of atrocious doctrines with boasts of his infidelity and constant charges against his wife's integrity, she testifies to the crowning outrage of his having discharged all the servants in her absence in order to instal another woman in her place, who was retained after the wife's return in relations of criminal intimacy. It is hard to conceive of deeper wretchedness than is pictured in her following reference to this period.

"She hurt me more than any one in the world. She was more severe and treated me with greater contempt than anybody else ever did. He never took my side. I did not think there was a place for my head to be down on in that house, and frequently went out wandering in the streets night after night. I walked with a water proof cloak on, and would go back and creep into the basement, and lie down anywhere, utterly wretched. Once I went away from home, thinking I would not come back, but found that I had left my purse at home, and had to return. On one occasion went to the graves of my two children, at Greenwood, laid down there, and felt at peace. We ordered off the grounds, but told he keeper the spot was the graves of my children, and he left me there the rest of the day."

After Tilton left the Independent, witness said she suffered much from want. Some times had no fire many times no food, and Theodore was utterly indifferent to it. She concludes with a remark that she has not one pang of conscience, that she has done everything she could as a good wife and mother to her children, and feels that she has borne and suffered for her husband's sake, and that he alone is responsible for the disruption in the family.

Turning from this testimony to other phases of the case, we find Tilton declining to recognize the tribunal to which he presented his charges, refusing to produce the documents which constitute the sole support of his startling charges, and preparing to fling this stone of scandal through years of litigation. Very strangely, Moulton, the custodian of all the important papers, found occasion to disappear just at the time when his evidence was most earnestly desired, and after a weeks sojourn with the wily criminal advocate who is expected to conduct Tilton's case in court, this "mutual friend," who had furnished Tilton with the extracts from Beecher's letters upon which to base his attack, not only declined acceding to Beecher's request for his testimony, but refused to permit him to see his own letters, on the ground that they might prove injurious to Tilton. It is within the range of possibility that Moulton may be able to excuse what seems an utterly incomprehensible course, but certainly the aspects of the case as we are advised at this writing invite a strong suspicion of conspiracy. On one point at least the public mind is satisfied, and that is that Mr Beecher is not closing the mouth of this witness, and the clear-cut sentences with which he protests against treachery and imperative ly demands the production of his letters before the Committee, will go farther in inspiring renewed confidence in the writer than anything else which he could have said. These later developments excite a still deeper interest in this remarkable case, and it is to be hoped that no devices can much longer delay the manifestation of the truth in all its forces.

WHERE KENNEBEC STANDS.

The significance of the complete victory of the friends of Senator Hamlin at Augusta, claimed in our special despatch of yesterday, is fully confirmed by the reports of special correspondents of the Boston papers. The Journal's Augusta despatch says

At the Republican caucus in this city this evening the choice of delegates to the approaching County and Senatorial Convention turned on the Senatorial issue, which was raised by the friends of Gov Perham and promptly accepted by the friends of Mr. Hamlin. The caucus was a large one and the Hamlin ticket was elected unanimously, it receiving one hundred and seventy-nine votes, or every vote that was cast, the Perham men having abandoned the field before the vote was taken. The result will evidently surprise the friends of Mr. Perham elsewhere, who have been led to believe that this city was his stronghold, and may also be set down as a fair and accurate expression of the sentiment of Kennebec county on the Senatorial issue.

The Daily Advertiser's special is to the same effect, although in putting it in type the name which we have placed in brackets was evidently omitted by a blunder:

The Republican caucus held in this city this evening, for the choice of delegates to the County and Senatorial Convention, was the first expression given by the people of the Kennebec valley on the United States Senatorial question. The Perham forces were entirely routed, as in a large caucus, delegates were unanimously chosen in favor of the selection of a [Hamlin] candidate for State Senator. Mr. Perham's strength in Kennebec county, which has been represented as so apparent to all political observers is found to be perfect weakness.

Our sprightly legal friend at the State Capital will have to write another letter to the Somerset Reporter to prove that Mr. Hamlin has no friends in Kennebec.

THE CHICAGO CORNER.

According to the Chicago Times, the corner in corn, which culminated on Friday in that city, and caused such excitement in the Board of Trade, was brought about by a combination, which was organized about the 1st of June, extending from Des Moines, Iowa, to Chicago, New York, and a large house in Liverpool, England, to get control of the corn market, and handle the balance of the crop of 1874. These operators bought an immense amount for June and July delivery, and intended to squeeze the "shorts" at the end of June. At that time, however, the receipts were so large, ranging over 1000 car loads a day, that they couldn't afford to corner. They then laid their plans to extend their purchases for July, determining to accomplish at the end of July what they had failed to do in June. Four prominent parties engineered this corner. Mr. Sturgis, one of the leading members of the Board of Trade, who has attended to the purchasing; Mr. E. K. Bruce, who had charge of shipping the grain, the Chicago branch of the Bank of Montreal, through which the financial operations were transacted, and the house of Jesse Hoyt & Co., New York, which handled the corn on arrival there. The combination has handled about fifteen million bushels of corn, all of which was bought, paid for and shipped. The bulk of it has gone to Europe, but large consignments have also gone to Montreal. The financial banking of the combination is said to range between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. It was on Tuesday morning that the pressure was first brought to bear. Everything had been arranged. Prices opened at 63 cents, and the combination marched their forces upon the field. The figures were buoyed up to 64 cents on Change. At the afternoon board 65 cents was reached, and on the curb in the evening 66½ cents. This began to open the eyes somewhat of the more wary operators, but they failed to catch the real meaning of the transaction until Wednesday.

Wednesday morning corn opened at 68½ cents, advanced to 75, and closed at 72 on Change, with settlements between parties outside the ring at one to three cents under the market price. The call for margins to secure trade was very large, and many, who were unable to put up, were forced to settle after dark. The market, on the curb, closed at 75 cents. It is estimated that fully one half of the boards have been "caught on the turn," not expecting that the combination would succeed in carrying out the operations it had on hand.

The amount of corn in store on Wednesday was as follows: Yellow, 12,656 bushels; No. 1, 2,171 bushels; high mixed, 298,324; No 2, 1,064,346 bushels. Of this grain probably four fifths is held by the combination which has brought about this corner. On the culmination of the corner on Friday, and the consternation among the dealers our despatches have given an account. The subsequent history of the combination will probably be read in the suspension or failure of certain lame wary operators.

THE SENATORSHIP.

From the Bath Times, edit rial

Portland has two candidates for the U S Senate. Hon. J. H. Drummond, who has served several years with distinction in the Legislature, has been Attorney General of the State for two or three years, and is one of the leading lawyers of the State. Hon Israel Washburn served in Congress with honor for a number of terms, representing the Penobscot district. He was Governor of the State during three years, and for eight or nine years has been Collector for the port of Portland.

Oxford county presents the name of Hon. Sidney Perham. He served in Congress six years, representing this district and gaining almost universal satisfaction to his constituents. Three years he has been Governor of the State, and no word has ever been spoken against his fidelity or integrity.

All three of these gentlemen are well known to the whole people of the State as men of high character and unblemished honor, certain it is that the State will suffer no discredit if either of them shall be called to fill a seat in the National Senate.

The other name mentioned in this connection is that of the present Senator, Hon. Hannibal Hamlin. In all the years of his public service he has shown the utmost fidelity in the discharge of duty, promptness in attending to the wants of his constituents, and an unsullied integrity. The long service in the Senate gives to him, and through him to the State, an influence in directing and controlling legislation such as no new man could possess. It is very plain that so far as the interests of the whole people of the State are concerned Mr. Hamlin is best able to promote them; the wants of individuals certainly ought to give place to the best good of the State, and until it can be shown that some other man can more efficiently serve the State than can Mr. Hamlin, no man is called upon to apologize for giving the latter his support in preference to any other man.

Less than three dozen melancholy Democrats assembled at Augusta Tuesday and nominated E. K. O'Brien, of Thomaston, as the gentleman whose name is to appear in the returns announcing the election of Speaker Blaine to Congress. The versatile E F Pilsbury was chief fugler, and having no murderer to defend just now at the expense of the State, was enabled to "present a series of thrilling resolutions denouncing the extravagance and corruption of the Republicans." These were adopted, the little band of patriots dispersed, and the Kennebec still glides peacefully down to the sea.

THE TRIBUNE AND BELMONT. The N. Y. Tribune having stated that the Rothschilds did not invest in government loans during the war because Mr. Belmont, their agent in this country, advised them not to do so, Mr Belmont publishes a letter denying the statement, and challenging the production of an act or word of his not dictated by patriotism and devotion to the Union. The Tribune rejoins that it has good authority for its statement in relation to the Rothschilds, and adds:

We are glad, however, to accept Mr. Belmont's assurance that he himself never faltered in his conviction that the war for the Union was sure to succeed; and shall be even better pleased, on his account, when he reconciles that faith with his attitude in the darkest hour of the struggle, as Chairman of the National Committee of his party, conducting a campaign for the defeat of Abraham Lincoln, on a platform that solemnly declared the war for the Union a failure.

"NOBBY" WEDDINGS. The latest novelty in the way of weddings is the fitting up of the vestibule of the sacred edifice as a dressing room for the bride and her attendants. According to a report of a wedding ceremony which recently took place in New York, the vestibule of the church was furnished for the occasion, with "mirrors, tables, chairs, brushes, powder and hair pins." This is a step in the right direction, but like many a similar step it only serves to show how far short we really fall of completeness in these matters. To have a really elegant and thoroughly unexceptionable wedding in the church, there should be in addition to the dressing room for the ladies, a similar room for the groom and his supporters, with a tonsorial artist in attendance. This might appropriately be located in the basement, and if a small space in the organ loft could be devoted to the sale of neckties, and other lighter articles of gentlemen's wear, there would be nothing for the most fastidious to desire.—Ex.

CROPS IN MINNESOTA. Along the line of the Winona & St. Peter Railway, the reports from twenty-one different localities give views of the crop prospects which are far from discouraging. Only in one or two of the places are the crops pronounced very good, but no place reports them below the average either in quality or quantity. Two-thirds is the most frequent estimate of the yield. In some of the localities there is considerable harm done by rust, and hay is generally light; but there is very little complaint of damage either by grasshoppers or insects. Oats appear to be the most promising crop in the region.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The Sacramento Union announces that Wm. M. Stewart is not a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate from Nevada.

Mr. George C. Gorham, Secretary of the United States Senate, appears in California politics now as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor.

The New York Times is very sanguine over the prospects of the political campaign in that State, saying: "Take it all in all, we have very little doubt that there will be some good hard work done between this and next November, and that at the end of it the Democrats will be in their usual place—nowhere."

It appears that the New Hampshire Legislature, in its haste to gerrymander Dover in the interests of Democracy, neglected to repeal the law allowing the city councils to change ward boundaries at any time. Accordingly the Republican City Council proposes to change the wards back to their original status.

The North Carolina election occurs on Thursday. A correspondent of the N. Y. Times says, "A canvass of eight counties by townships, through diligent inquiries among leading men of both parties, indicates very few changes—none among the colored men, and but few among the whites—most of which changes are said to be in favor of the Republicans."

A Western correspondent of the New York World has discovered that the Indiana Democrats have already repented of their inflation platform. He says, also, that Mr. Hendricks has been killed so far as 1876 is concerned, and even for the Senatorship of 1874 he is disqualified, for should he accept it, a Republican Lieutenant Governor would succeed to the gubernatorial chair.

The New York World thinks that Mr Stearns' allowing his name to be used in the Massachusetts Eleventh District in the coming Congressional contest "renders the election of that gentleman a foregone conclusion." When that paper hears that any Democrat, no matter what his name, is chosen to be a successor of Mr. Dawes, it will be emphatically an "Old World."—Boston Journal.

The Brooklyn Scandal!

TILTON DECLINES TO SEPARATE!

HE PROPOSES A LONG LAWSUIT!

MR. BEECHER'S LETTERS TO MOULTON!

A Sharp Demand for the Papers!

Rev. Dr. Storrs Interviewed!

MOULTON TO TESTIFY!

TILTON REFUSES TO SIGN THE PAPERS OF SEPARATION

NEW YORK, Aug 5. Mr Ovington says that Theodore Tilton refuses to sign papers of separation although Mrs. Tilton is willing to sign them, and that he also will remain at his house in Livingstone st., Brooklyn, until the whole case is settled.

BELIEF THAT TILTON WILL PREVENT MOULTON FROM TESTIFYING.

It is not generally believed either by the Beecher Committee or friends of Moulton that he will now go before that Committee at all. He will not get the consent of Tilton, and he says without the written consent of both Beecher and Tilton he believed, as does Ben. Butler, that he has not the right to violate mutual confidence.

THE GAYNOR SUIT DISMISSED

The suit brought by Gaynor against Tilton for libel was up this morning before Justice Riley in court at Brooklyn. Gaynor was present very early but neither Tilton nor Judge Morris, his counsel, were present. On the opening of court the case was called when Gaynor stated that as the case was to be taken to a higher court he withdrew the complaint, whereupon Judge Riley curtly dismissed the case, and the few spectators dispersed

MR BEECHER'S LETTERS TO MOULTON—THE FIRST REQUEST

The letters of Mr Beecher to Moulton are as follows

Brooklyn, July 28, 1874.

My Dear Friend—The Committee of Investigation are waiting mainly for you before closing their labors I, too, wish you would come and clear your mind and memory of everything that can bear on my case. I pray you to bring all letters and papers relating to it which will throw any light upon and bring to a result this protracted case I trust that Mrs M has been reinvigorated, and her mind of your care will not be so great as to detain you. Yours truly,

H. W. BEECHER.

F D Moulton, Esq

MOULTON REFUSES TO PRODUCE THE PAPERS—SCARING LETTER FROM MR. BEECHER—AN IMPERATIVE DEMAND FOR THE DOCUMENTS

Brooklyn, Aug. 4, 1874.

F. D Moulton—Sir Your letter, bearing date Aug 4, 1874, is this moment received. Allow me to express my regret and astonishment that you refuse me permission even to see certain letters and papers in your possession, relating to the charges made against me by Theodore Tilton, and at the reason given for the refusal. On your solemn and repeated assurances of personal friendship, and in the unquestioning confidence with which you inspired me of your honor and fidelity, I placed in your hands various letters addressed to me from my brother, my sister and various other parties: also a memoranda of affairs not immediately connected with Mr Tilton's matter I also, from time to time, addressed confidential notes relating to my own self, one friend would write to another These papers were never placed in your hands to be held for two parties, nor to be used in any way. They were to be held for me. I did not wish them to be subject to the risk of loss or scattering from my careless habits in the matter of preserving documents They were to be held for me. In so far as these papers were concerned, you were only a friendly trustee, holding papers subject to my wishes.

Mr. Tilton has made a deadly assault upon me and has used letters and fragments of letters purporting to be copies of these papers Are these extracts genuine? Are they garbled? What are their dates? What, if any thing, has been left out and put in? Your refuse my demand for these papers on the various plans that I speak, the result is my statement I do not need them; that if I fling a successful use of them it will be an injury to Mr. Tilton and that you, as a friend of both parties, are bound not to aid either in any act that shall injure the other. But I do not desire to injure any one, but to repel an injury attempted upon me by the use of papers committed sacredly to your care.

These documents have been seen and copied, they have been hawked for sale in New York newspaper offices, what purports to be my confidential notes to you are on the market, but when I demand a sight of the originals of papers of which you are only a trustee, that I may defend myself, you refuse because you are a friend of both parties

Mr. Tilton has access to your depository for materials with which to stritke me, but I am not permitted to use them in defending myself

I do not ask you to place before the Committee any papers which Mr Tilton may have given you, but I now demand that you forthwith place before the Committee every paper which I have written and deposited with you Yours truly,

H W. BEECHER.

REPORT THAT MOULTON WILL TESTIFY.

It is announced, ostensibly on his own authority, that F D. Moulton goes before the Beecher Committee to-night.

TILTON PREPARING FOR A TWO-YEARS' LAWSUIT

Tilton has collected all papers in support of his coming suit against Beecher and they are under review by his counsel. It may be some days before summons and complaint are served, and 20 days, of course, are then allowed for Beecher's answer. The litigation is likely to last a year or two.

MR. BEECHER INTERVIEWED.

Beecher said to day to a reporter that he appreciated the gravity of the situation; thought he should come out all right, but was in the hands of the committee. They are said to be all able men and will do right.—Whether he should prepare a statement or submit to an examination was for the committee to decide. A straw may turn it either way. He would not permit the committee to ask him questions. Should they do so he would say "They were the Court and (smiling) the Court could not advice with the prisoner at the bar."

REV. DR STORRS INTERVIEWED.

The Tribune to-morrow publishes an interview with Rev. Dr. Storrs, in relation to the Tilton-Beecher scandal. He says:

"It was a week or ten days after the publication of the Woodhull scandal that Tilton came to me for advice. Some public statement he thought was necessary as a reply, but in what form or even how far it should go, he could not himself decide. Upon this point he wished counsel; for this he came to me as a friend of Mr. Beecher. As Mr. Tilton stated before the Committee I had not yet read the paper of Mrs. Woodhull, but told Tilton I would borrow a copy of a friend who had one and read it if he desired it. I did so, and as agreed Tilton called again

I told him I had read the statement with much care, and that there were four points in it to be denied: first, that Beecher and Mrs. T. had criminal relations; second, that you discovered this; third, that Mr. Beecher received a paper from Mrs. Tilton, denying that such relations had ever existed, and fourth, that Moulton obtained that paper from Mr. Beecher.

I did not say, as Mr. Carpenter has put it, that I had drawn four conclusions, but that these four points were to be denied. I was of the impression that a simple and material denial by those concerned would probably be made, and thus an end be put to the vile story. Mr. Tilton, however, said to me: 'Supposing the people cannot be so minded?' I told him in effect that in that case a plain statement of the truth or absolute silence on his part were the alternatives open to him. That it would not answer to attempt any evasion in a public statement, since that would not silence the scandal, but, instead, would keep it alive and give it new force. Beyond this I declined to give advice unless he should be disposed to acquaint me with sufficient facts in the case to enable me to form an intelligent judgment. He did not wish to do this, and I did not urge him thereto. Soon after this, however, Tilton came to my house accompanied by Carpenter, and said he wished to present to me such facts as would enable me to comprehend his position and give him advice.

MRS. TILTON'S LETTER.

At the same time he handed me a letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton in her hand-writing, which I read and returned to him. I did not take a copy of that letter, but it was of course deeply impressed on my mind, and after Tilton went away I made notes of it as well as of the statement which he afterwards read. I have not those memoranda with me, but if I remember correctly, and I think I cannot be mistaken, the letter began:

'On a certain day in the Summer of 1870, I informed my husband that Mr. Beecher had asked me to become a wife to him,' with all that these words imply.'

This was a most remarkable statement. I was of course shocked by it. I demurred to listening to Mr. Tilton's statement, but with the understanding from the letter and from Mr. Tilton that it was the wishand request of Mrs. Tilton that I should do so I attended to the reading by Tilton of a paper which included a portion of the letters and documents that have since been published. I do not recall my exact language to Mr. Tilton when he had finished reading; but, as I said before, the substance of it was that no public card embodying an evasion would in any way better the case. It would be preferable to take no notice of Mrs. Woodhull's paper.

At the time when Tilton first came to consult me and at subsequent interviews he did not seem actuated by any spirit of malice. He spoke with no bitterness of Beecher and of his wife with affection and tenderness. He was not violent in his language and appeared honestly seeking some peaceful solution. One of his expressions was "revenges have turned out." He seemed to me to be sad and depressed by a great burden which he was in vain trying to remove.

MRS. TILTON'S DISAVOWAL.

Mrs. Tilton came to my house for the first time one day during last February or March, fully a year and a fourth after she had written the letter regarding Beecher for me to see. She then informed me she was in no sense the author of that letter, and that the statement in it affecting Mr. Beecher was utterly false, without a shadow of foundation in fact. I was as much astonished to hear her denial as when I read her charge over a year before, and asked her if she realized what she had done. She said she did fully realized the sin she had committed. I told her she had done Beecher an incalculable wrong in allowing a false charge so fearful in its character to stand against him so long a time, whatever the circumstances which caused her, to make it; that it was terrible wickedness against God and a crime against society. She knew it and acknowledged it all.

Dr. Storrs spoke with much feeling of the many years of friendship between Mr. Beecher and himself, and said that none could hope more strongly than he that Mr. Beecher would prove to be blameless.

MOULTON BEFORE THE COMMITTEE.

F. D. Moulton appeared before the Committee this evening, and was in the house about an hour. It was stated that he would be before the Committee Saturday evening next armed with his letters and documents, he having asked time to arrange them in order. The Committee will not meet to-morrow evening unless a special meeting should be called.

THE AMERICAN EXCURSIONISTS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5. Mail advices from Thorshavn, Faroe Islands, dated Sunday, July 26th, were received in London yesterday, and the contents forwarded by cable. The excursionists accompanying C. W. Field to Iceland, who go out to attend the millennial celebration, report the progress of the journey in the following words:

"We arrived at Thorshavn, Faroe Islands, yesterday afternoon, all in good health and spirits. The King of Denmark reached Thorshavn a few days before us, and will sail for Iceland to-morrow afternoon. We shall leave to-morrow morning, as we wish to be in Iceland when the King arrives. We are all delighted with what we have seen. This morning the church at Thorshavn was full of persons anxious to hear the sermon, and perhaps some to see the King of Denmark, who was present. Thorshavn presents a gay sight, every vessel in the harbor and every house in the town flying the Danish flag Our steamer has the American flag at the fore, the Danish flag at the main, and the English at the stern."

A number of their fellow-workmen dug them out as soon as possible, and they were found to be shockingly crushed and bruised. They were taken to their respective homes on mattresses, and medical aid summoned, but Constantine, who resided on Hammond-st near the Kersey farm, was so severely injured that he lived only until three o'clock in the afternoon. She staggered and fell, covered with the fast-gushing blood, and several persons went to her aid and removed her to the house, hoping the wound was not mortal, but she lived only two hours She expressed no regret for the deed.

MAINE STATE COLLEGE.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

Yesterday was Commencement Day proper at the Maine State College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, at Orono, and there was a large gathering of relatives and friends of the students and friends of the institution to attend the exercises. The early forenoon found many visitors looking over the College buildings, the well-fitted and furnished laboratory and the natural history and mineralogical collections attracting much attention, while the farm and the new model barn found a large number of admirers, who were conducted to the various points of interest by Mr. Farrington, the courteous Farm Superintendent.

By eleven o'clock the new Town Hall at Orono village was crowded with people to attend the appointed for that hour, which were promptly opened as announced. President Allen presided, and the order of exercises was as follows.—

MUSIC—PRAYER—MUSIC

Classical Education.	Rodney David Hunter, Corinth
Chemistry	Walter Balentine, Waterville
	MUSIC
Let there be Light	Louis Hammond Ramsdell, Atkinson
Applied Science	William Albert Allen, Orono.
	MUSIC
Human Progress	John Irvine Gurney, Foxcroft
Men of Our Day	William Herbert Gerrish Portland
	MUSIC

The members of the class all acquitted themselves with credit, and their essays displayed a depth of thought, a thoroughness of investigation and a breadth of expression which would have honored the graduates of any college in the land. The audience were amazing of their expressions of approval and pleasure, and each speaker was loudly applauded and well showered with bouquets, wreaths and other floral tributes.

At the close union of the essays the members of the class took their stations in line upon the stage, in front of the Trustees, and President Allen with a few appropriate remarks presented the well earned diplomas and conferred the degrees. William Albert Allen, Walter Balentine, William Herbert Gerrish, John Irvine Gurney, Rodney David Hunter and Louis Hammond Ramsdell, having completed the prescribed course, received the degree of Bachelor of Science, and William Albert Allen received also the degree of Civil Engineer.

President Allen then announced the decisions of the committee chosen to award prizes for the Sophomore and Junior Exhibitions. The prize for the best declamation was awarded to Horace Melora Estabrook, of Lincoln, of the Sophomore Class The committee were not unanimous in their decision as to the best composition by the Junior Class, and they therefore compromised and dividing the prize into two equal parts awarded them to Edgar Alexander Work, of Bangor, the title of whose composition was "Shall All She Vote?" and to Charles Frederic Durham, of Monroe, whose composition was on "The Antiquity of Man" The announcement of the awards was received with hearty applause.

The music for the occasion was furnished by the Beethoven Quintette Club, of Boston, and was, of course, first class.

At one o'clock P. M., immediately after the close of the exercises in the Town Hall, was served in the hall of the Orono House, in which a large company sat down. The Divine blessing was invoked by Rev. Dr. Stone of Bangor, and the excellent and abundant viands laid by mine host Reed received a hearty commendation in the vigor with which they were attacked. After a due discussion of the "feast of fat things," the "feast of reason" was inaugurated in a pleasant little speech by President Allen, who called on Governor Dingley, who sat at his right hand, to make some remarks.

COMMENCEMENT DINNER

The Govern or gracefully complied, expressing as grateful a sense of the appearance of the College, the proficiency of the students, and particularly the exercises of the graduating class to which he had just listened. He was rejoiced to see the method of popularizing liberal culture adopted by the College a success, and hoped the State would see fit to endow more liberally in the future an institution doing so noble a work. He alluded to the fact of a lady being a member of the graduating class, and expressed his hearty approval of the system which gave the girls an equal chance with the boys to gain a practical as well as liberal education, saying that from the specimen heard to-day he was confident that the latter would have to look to their laurels or they would be excelled on their own ground.

Senator Hamlin was next called upon, and said he had experienced more gratification in attending this Commencement than those of the exclusively literary colleges in the State this season, for he felt a personal interest in this institution, having been identified with its early struggles, and labored for its endowment. He was assured that this College supplied a want long felt in the State, as it gave prominence to one branch in which every portion of the State was interested—the science of agriculture. Already much has been accomplished in elevating the agriculture of Maine to a higher plane of intelligence, and this school, being just what is needed to ensure a continuance of the work, should receive the hearty support of the people, until the living rays sent out at each successive Commencement shall illumine the whole State.

Ex-Gov. Washburn was next called up, and responded by expressing his satisfaction at being able to be present. The exercises to-day assured him that the college is destined to graduate year after year causes whose influence will be felt throughout the whole State for good—strong, practical, earnest and valuable young men and women. He spoke of the fine location of the college—adjacent to some of the finest farming lands of the State, and said that, although there had been in years past a general exodus from the farming towns, they were as only richer and producing more than ever before, owing to the railroads bringing the markets to their doors, and the improved machinery in use. That such an institution as the College has been established is a guarantee of a bright future for the agriculture of our State.

Ex-Gov. Perham was called upon and said that now, as in the past, he felt a deep interest in the College, which combined the interests of education and labor, and taught with especial reference to the practical duties of life. The graduates of classical colleges, if they cannot make a living by their brains, must be a burden to others through life; but here students are educated physically as well as mentally, and are self-reliant. He felt assured that whoever lives to see thirty years more will see this institution a greater success than all others in the State.

Ex-Gov. Coburn, in response to a call from the President, expressed his satisfaction at the progress of the College, and declared his faith in its continued success.

Hon. S. H. Blake, of Bangor, was next called up, and, after expressing his pleasure at the exercises of the day and the plan of this College, advocated the founding of a State University, adducing reasons of much weight for its establishment. He was confident of the success of this College, as it is removed from direct competition with the others in the State by the difference in its curriculum, and because it was controlled by no party, sect or denomination.

Rev Dr. Stone of Bangor said he agreed with everything which had been said. He believed this college was doing a work which other schools of the State cannot do, and though controlled by no religious denomination, was advancing the welfare of true religion as well as materially benefitting the State.

Rev. W. R. Cross, of Orono, also heartily indorsed what had been said. He came from the western part of the State with a feeling of indifference towards the College, but had become deeply interested in its welfare on seeing its workings.

Rev. Henry Shephard, of Orono, wished to add his testimony concerning the liberality of the institution towards all religious beliefs, and highly complimented the Faculty on their ability and success.

Mr. Boardman of the Maine Farmer was called on to respond for the Press, but had left the hall, and Mr. Perry of the WEEKLY WHIG & COURIER responded briefly in his stead.

Sara C. Brett, Esq., of Bangor, made a brief speech in response to a call, and highly commended the aims and work of the college, which, he said, supplied a want long felt by those desiring a practical education. He thoroughly believed in Maine and its advantages, and thought the Faculty should seek to inculcate in the students under their charge a love for the home State which would induce them to remain and give it the advantages of the education acquired by its liberality.

At the suggestion of J. C. Madigan, Esq., of Houlton, the company joined in singing "Old Hundred," and then repaired to the Town Hall to listen to the address by Rev Dr. Hill of Portland.

The subject of the Doctor's address was "The Mutual Relations of the Practical Arts and Abstract Sciences," and the following is a brief summary:—

DR. HILL'S ADDRESS.

He began by the confession that the arts were to a large degree independent of the sciences. Science sought truth for truth's sake; the arts sought utility for mere sake. It was true that utility is a word of wide meaning; and abstract truth might be considered useless in satisfying the human thirst for knowledge. Nevertheless there was a broad distinction; the arts served the body and only mediately the mind; the sciences addressed the mind only. The use of a science was in the satisfaction which it gives the intellect; or in the key it gives to higher sciences; or in the food it furnishes to devout contemplation. The use of the arts was in the preparation of material products, or in the gratification of the senses. Yet both the scientific men and the artisans were at work in the same great laboratory of nature, and were constantly able to give each other hints and suggestions of great importance and fruitfulness.

Practice should implied some knowledge while scientific knowledge did not imply practice. It still, therefore, although the workshop and the farm often gave the men of science valuable suggestions, it still more frequently happened that the man of science gave the practical man knowledge on which he could build new inventions and new arts. The history of science was full of instances in which purely abstract discoveries became afterwards in the hands of practical men, fruitful of results of the largest commercial value.

Schools of applied science ought, therefore, if possible, to be placed in the immediate vicinity of schools of abstract science, that the practical students on each kind of study might stimulate the other to a free thought and investigation. The higher the class of intellects thus brought into close relations, the more rapid would be the progress both in science and in inventions. It was for the pecuniary advantage of the whole nation that the best genius for pure science, as well as that for practical invention, should be fostered and educated in the best manner.

He would acknowledge that many great mechanical inventions and some chemical arts of value had been the work of practical men without the aid of science; but on the other hand he would refer to electricity and chemistry, navigation and engineering for numerous instances of the most valuable practical arts resulting from scientific devotion to truth and the exhibition of exceptional genius, exceptional industry and exceptional learning. Such men were rare, therefore it was the greater loss to the nation if any of them failed to find the opportunity for the highest culture. It was this great defect of the educational system of our country that it provided for the education of the many but not for the education of the few who desired the highest instruction and the most thorough training. He was glad to find this College at Orono aiming so high, seeking to increase human knowledge as well as to train that already attained by others. He trusted they would continue to seek light from every quarter and apply it to mechanical and agricultural uses Agriculture was and are high and difficult, calling all the sciences to its aid. He needed a few great leaders thoroughly instructed in science and with a native tact in discovering practical modes of applying that knowledge to use. Many very important and difficult questions were already pressing themselves upon our attention; for their solution we must look to men highly educated with special reference to such matters. He referred to various diseases of horses, cattle, sheep and swine; to diseases also on trees and plants; to the domestication of wild animals, the cultivation of wild plants, the preservation of forests, the reclaiming of bogs, the ravages of insects, and sundry other points as instances of the matters that needed well-trained minds to deal with them, and that promised the richest pecuniary return for their successful solution. But in closing, Dr. Hill warned the young student that he must in general approach one of these large questions by gradual advances and not show "faulting ambition" to hurry him beyond ground on which he had firm footing.

The address was listened to with marked attention by a large audience, who frequently applauded the telling points made by the speaker It was an admirable production and deserves preservation in some more permanent form.

MEETING OF THE BOARDS.

The Boards held a meeting, and transacted considerable business, but did nothing of interest to the public except to elect Lieut. W. S. Chaplin, U. S. A., a recent graduate of West Point, to a Professorship. He was not assigned, however, and this matter will be arranged hereafter.

THE COMMENCEMENT CONCERT,

which occurred in the Town Hall in the evening, was attended by as many people as the neat and spacious auditorium could possibly accommodate. It was given by the Beethoven Quintette Club of Boston, assisted by Miss Annie Louise Cary, the distinguished contralto. Miss Cary was in superb voice and sang gloriously. Her numbers on the programme were the rondo "No, no, no!" from the Huguenots, the ballad "Kathleen Mavourneen," and the cavatina "Ah! quel giorno," from Semiramide. These selections were admirably adapted to display the best qualities of her voice and its perfect training, and the house fairly rose to her with enthusiasm. She was recalled six times, and in response to encores sang the ballad "Birds in the Night," the "Old Folks at Home," and "Star Spangled Banner."

The Quintette Club was as usual well-nigh perfection in its playing, and its numbers were the overture "Bandits' Frolic," the scherzando and adagio from Mendelssohn's Quintette in B flat, an andante from one of Haydn's Symphonies, Schumann's favorite "Traumerei," and a fantasia on Scotch airs by Bishop. A duet for violin and bello on a Swiss air (by Kummer) was admirably rendered by Mr. Allen and Mr. Fries, and Mr. Bistoal played a fine solo—variations on air from Rigoletto—in a manner which gained for him an enthusiastic encore.

A large party from this city went up to the concert on a special train on the E. & N. A. road, returning after the conclusion of the entertainment, while many others went up with teams.

—Altogether the Commencement—the third which the State College has had—was a grand success in every respect, and the officers, faculty and students of the institution may well feel proud of the excellent manner in which all the arrangements were made and carried out for the occasion.

LIFE AND DEATH

Doth life survive the touch of death?
Death's hand alone the secret holds,
With hands to seal one kindly eye,
We press to know with baited breath

A whisper there, a whisper here,
Confirms that hope to which we cling.
But still we grasp and we are crying,
And sometimes hope and sometimes fear

Seems whisper that the dead we know
Hear our moan do while we pray
And seem to say—"We can not come
We only wait it may be for you."

I know a Saint who has thought,
A healthy habit flows through his veins,
And joy his present life sustains,
And still this good has come unsought,

For man is cannot rightly pray,
Life is so selfish! Life! Life! mine
Is dower the death, sure of peace,
Sure of the best in God's own way

Perfect! is work in the race of man,
It we hang on this great chain,
We do not fail if we can keep weight
To be the refuse of life plain

But if we do, feel no such pause
There is think I have to do
That life is half before me ever,
If so I defer it it is unfinished.

And so the cultured pilot of mind,
Day by day, wind over where
Has but to sunshine in deepest
Has at the sunshine unbind

He rudder workman would not thing
The tree never fell toward a way
If any incline all of right
He tree is with a sunshine to go

And so the Wheel Worker take
Quick human traits instead of alone
And the sunshine of the Spirit by grace,
Or hope the pangs with which they bloom

And man, if but reason's wisdom,
Will at the same given the sense to cease
Of the sunshine of the Spirit on earth
And life! Life! life to cease!

If life if we and cease to be,
Life is reason
Cease the sunshine to earn and
Sunshine and sunshine

Will or to reflection and to cry,
A sigh of life again,
What thought shall never be in vain
And life before the light shall fly
Mission.—Olive

A young New Yorker was very sweet on a very wealthy lady and began to pay her serious attention. The girl's parents, thinking both too young to keep company with each other, gave a gentle hint to the young man, by taking the girl out of the room, and sending her to bed and, secondly, by the lady of the house bringing in a huge slice of bread and butter spread with jam, and saying to the youth, in her kindest manner there, "Eat this, Jim, it will last a long way, and you think there will be actions."

HOW A BOY WAS SAVED, AND THE ASTONISHED BEATER.—The army worm has in California met an actual defeat. These creatures have been in the habit of marching in solid lines at Sacramento last week and opposition was utterly powerless by the preachers or by fire but the experiment of setting turkeys against them proved completely successful.—The birds rushed at them, and for several days had a regular feast upon them, gobbling themselves almost to surfeit with this delicious treat. For awhile it was uncertain which party would prevail but latest accounts report a complete triumph for the birds. The army worm is now disposed of the country, save in the best crop and inasmuch as the beets were in hundreds of acres, cultivated for sugar, the victory sates an important industry that was threatened with entire destruction. Some of the birds suffered. One, it feebly died, and being dissected was found to contain 1100 worms, many of which were still alive. There were about 3000 turkeys engaged, and the total number of worms eat in may be calculated at leisure. The meth of of removing the pests by pitting against them their natural destroyers is commendable, and there is a lesson in it for our Eastern farmers.
